Huntress: The Cyber Game is the first title under the new deal with the makers of Soul Calibur made by the French development studio CyberConnect2. The game borrows from elements from the beloved genre and combines them with classical anime references and combats. It has an extensive customization of the character, and highly accurate 3D graphics. PROLOGUE: A girl with cyborg eyes. She is also a good fighter. She turns her back to you in a fight and you lose your life. She is so good at combat, that she even fights good with her rear. The huntress is injured but she does not lose her spirit, never turning away. A strong female character. The game starts with Hikaru Hayashibara, a girl with a "rear" so strong that it can defeat a man. She sees a strong warrior in a mysterious helmet and finds herself in an island, to defeat him and end the evil that threatens her. But in the game, you will find out that there are more than one person who wants to kill Hikaru. Natural Resources Minister Joe Oliver's decision not to launch a major regulatory review of the Liberal government's emissions plan and various energy projects in British Columbia is "unfortunate", says the BC NDP. In a news release issued on Wednesday, the NDP said Oliver's move effectively makes a "sneak attack" on the plan, which was to be reviewed by the province's Environmental Assessment Office. "The Liberals want to quietly transform B.C. into the worst of both worlds: a petro state trapped between a political system hostile to progressive energy policies and a regulatory regime that says no to good projects, no matter the environmental or social benefits," said Mike Farnworth, member of the B.C. Legislature for the riding of Vancouver Kingsway.

Oliver announced last month that major international meetings on greenhouse gas emissions caps and the divestment of stock in oil companies would be the focus of the province's review. However, in a news release, Oliver announced that those issues would not be the subject of his office's review. "We are in the midst of a great deal of change in the world. Our energy resources play a key role in both global production and our own economic growth and development, and it is clearly important that we continue to work with our partners in Canada and internationally to respond to challenges," the news release stated. The NDP
