Inferring the multiple mechanisms of DNA replication during the gamma-induced programmed cell death of Escherichia coli. The chromosomal origin of phage Chi has been cloned and its activity has been examined in vivo and in vitro during the death of Escherichia coli. We have demonstrated that the origin is capable of initiation of replication in vivo, but is inactive in vitro. This indicates that replication origin inactivation is an important factor contributing to the death of E. coli. The inactivation of the origin during phage-mediated programmed cell death may be accomplished in multiple steps. The origin was inactivated after the induction of gamma, showing that DNA synthesis, in conjunction with the induction of gamma, is required for the inactivation of the origin. This origin inactivation was found to be susceptible to drug treatment. Initiation of replication requires the presence of a replication protein, i.e. the DnaA protein (a protein which is required for the initiation of chromosomal replication in E. coli). The result indicates that the DnaA protein may play an important role in the inactivation of the origin.Q: Dynamically add Django DetailView to Panel I am trying to add a Django DetailView to a Panel dynamically based on some fields in the given queryset. In the Django docs I saw the following: class MyDetailView(DetailView): model = Author class MyDetailViewSet(viewsets.ModelViewSet): """ This viewset is for building individual objects by slug. """ queryset = Author.objects.all() lookup_field

Q: How to generate a vector of coordinates relative to an origin image I have a chessboard image in a PIL image, and then I have lines that run through the board. I want to be able to measure the distance between each of the lines and the bottom edge of the image. I plan to generate a vector that shows all the locations of the lines. The way I am right now is to draw the squares of the board and then generate a list of points relative to the position of the image. I can then iterate through the coordinates of the points and calculate the x and y values of each point. This sounds like a super easy task, but the image I have is 400x267 and the coordinates are not aligned with the board. I think this is causing me to lose precision. Is there any way to generate a vector of coordinates that are relative to the position of the image? edit: here is a snippet of the chessboard image I'm using: A: This is what I came up with based on comments: from math import sqrt, cos, sin, tan image = Image.open('chessboard.png') board_width = image.size[0] def find_coordinates(p0, p1): points = [] dx = p0[0] - p1[0] dy = p0[1] - p1[1] t = sqrt((dx  2) + (dy  2)) dy = dy / t k = 0.1 h = dy / k x0 = dx * h x1 = dx * (1 - h) while k
