Ward and an upcoming extension I plan to give to Buster Skrine, we really couldn't do it," Browns general manager John Dorsey told reporters. "We gave this offer to the Steelers because it was an offer that we could deliver. But it just didn't make sense for us." The Browns and Steelers are engaged in a battle for the No. 10 pick in next month's draft, and the two teams reportedly made a deal to swap picks, but the Browns made it clear they would not be able to match the offer. "I think it's a good value," Dorsey said. "From a practical standpoint and a value standpoint, I think it's a great value." The Browns, who picked No. 4 overall in the 2014 draft, have the best of both worlds -- and they believe they can now get both. The Browns now have the option to trade their first-rounder and move up to No. 1 if it lands there. "This is where we want to be," Dorsey said. "I think it's a good value. There's a lot of value there." If the Browns indeed jump up in the draft order, they would likely take a guarterback with their first pick. Even if they do not, the Browns still seem to be moving forward with their plan to build through the draft. "I think we're going to continue to do that," Dorsey said. "We're going to build through the draft. I don't think that's going to change. And it's not going to change based on what happens in the trade market." Information from ESPN's Field Yates was used in this report.Q: Changing the default document location from a network share to a local path in Windows I'm going to be developing a C# application that opens files and saves them to a network share. We are going to be working on the files in a folder which is on a network share at our office. But I want it so when we compile our application, it should save our files to a particular directory on our local computer. How can we do this in C#? Is there any f988f36e3a
